GREATER AIR FLEET TERRORIZES LONDON BY FLYING LOW ENOUGH TO THE STREETS TO BE VISIBLE

Details Withheld But It Is Believed That As Many As Twenty Crafts Were In German Attacking Fleet

BIGGEST AIR FLEET EVER TO ATTACK

London July 7.—Twenty enemy aeroplanes raided London today. Lord French, commander of the Home Defense forces, made preliminary announcement early today but gave no details.

Shortly before the announcement of the raid Lord French issued a statement saying that at 9:30 this morning hostile aeroplanes in considerable number in two parts had been sighted off the Isle of Bannet and the east coast of Essex. The raid on London occurred at 10:30.

This is the largest number of German aeroplanes ever participating in a raid over London. Apparently profiting by their poor bomb throwing at such a great height the German raiders today flew so low that they could be seen from the streets. This was directly contrary to other raids in which the aeroplanes were invisible.

The German aeroplanes which participated in the raid were brought down by the British as the enemy air fleet was returning to its base the Admiralty announced this afternoon.

AN OLD TIMER CALLS

Squire H. J. Sloppy, of New Millport, a prominent Knox township citizen, was a Clearfield visitor yesterday and while here dropped into the Progress office to chat with friends. Squire told us he was a native of Union county and came to Clearfield county away back in '49 and has since resided in the New Millport section. He is a Jeffersonian Democrat of the old school and is exceptionally well informed generally. He expressed the hope for an early settlement of the world war and is afraid the conscript law will drain the country of its young manhood, being a veteran of the Civil war he has first hand knowledge of the ravages of war.

NOTICE

The Woman's club will hold their regular meeting at the club rooms Tuesday at 3:00 p. m. There are several matters of importance to be settled before the meetings are discontinued for the summer. It was also decided that an ice cream and strawberry festival will be held next Thursday evening, the 12th, on the porch of the M. E. church to which all are invited.

OSCEOLA YOUNG MAN KILLED BY LIGHTNING

Paul Dugan Vainly Sought Refuge From Electrical Storm In Coal Mine Opening

BOLT STRUCK TREE NEARBY

Osceola Mills, July 7.—During a severe electrical and hail storm which passed over this vicinity yesterday afternoon Paul Dugan was struck by lightning and instantly killed. The young man, together with Arthur Dugan and Henry Nickerson were hauling coal for his father at "Polly's Knob." When the storm came on they sought shelter in a small opening or drift from which the coal had been removed. On the surface of the ground directly over them was a large tree, which was struck by lightning, the bolt passing from the tree down into the ground to where the men sat. The young man was about 24 years of age and is survived by his parents and several brothers and sisters. James Dugan, a brother, is proprietor of the Mountain House. The others who were with him were shocked also but under medical treatment soon recovered.

HOWARD E. COFFIN

As chairman of the Aircraft Production Board of the Council of National Defense, Howard E. Coffin probably bears more responsibility for the administration of the present aviation program than any other man in Washington.

Coffin is a westerner of tremendous vision and has given his time and money without a cent of return to the government. He has organized airplane manufacturers of America into one large association for the defense of the nation. He has helped work out a plan for an airplane engine that is said to be a wonder.

He is in his early forties and is one of the big crop of rapid successes begun in the automobile industry fifteen years ago. As head of the committee on munitions and materials he is also responsible for automobile trucks, training of chauffeurs, tires, motorization of field artillery and everything which runs with an engine.

On account of the fact that no petitions can be legally signed before that date the county commissioners will not supply any candidates petitions until Wednesday next. All prospective candidates however may make their applications before that time and their request will be granted and the petitions sent them July 11th.

Kate Thorn Lee Wedded To Charles Oberdick

Well Known Couple Will Live at Middleton, Connecticut

At ten o'clock this morning a very pretty wedding took place when Miss Kate Thorn Lee was united in marriage to Charles Oberdick, by the Rev. W. W. Hartman, of the Trinity Methodist church.

The wedding was very quiet only the relatives and intimate friends being present, on account of recent death of the bride's mother.

The bride was becomingly attired in a gray silk jersey suit with a satin hat to match.

Following the ceremony the wedding breakfast was served after which the bride and groom left for a honeymoon trip to Harrisburg and York. They will spend most of the time camping at the Oberdick cottage near York.

Mr. and Mrs. Oberdick will make their home in Middletown, Conn., where he is physical director of the Y. M. C. A.

Mrs. Oberdick is an accomplished and charming young lady of Clearfield and has been employed as bookkeeper for the W. F. Powell Hardware for several years.

LATIN AMERICAS HOLD CONGRESS BUENOS AYRES

Called for Purpose of Mediation Proposals is Reverts to Matters of Mutual Protection

MAY INDORSE U. S. ACTION

Buenos Aires, July 9.—The Congress of Latin-American Republics, which meet in Buenos Aires this week in response to an invitation from the Argentine government, is expected to be attended by eminent official representatives of all countries of Central and South America that have maintained an attitude of neutrality in the present war. As aelligent, the United States is disqualifed from participation in the conference; likewise it is not expected that Brazil will have any official voice in the proceedings, in review of the attitude recently adopted by the government of Rio de Janeiro in ordering the Brazilian fleet to co-operate with the United States squadron in the patrol of the South Atlantic.

Events with relation to the world war and the great question of South America neutrality have moved so rapidly late that it is impossible to state the aims or forecast the probable results of the Latin-American congress with any degree of certainty. Nothing definite is known, outside of official circles at least, of the explicit theme or themes which it is proposed to discuss at the meeting.

When the conference was first mooted its object was said to be nothing less than the ambitious one of peace mediation between the nations at war. So far as can be gathered to-day that object has settled down to the formulation of a policy for the protection of the economic interests of Latin-America in so far as they are affected by the war and threatened after the war. It is felt presumably that if solidarity in this respect can be arrived at, the united front presented by an entire continent will be more efficacious than the isolated action of any individual republic or group of republics.

Pan-Americanism has been subjected to a very severe test within the last few months and the entry of its most powerful component unit—the United States—into the war, has left most of the other republics more or less "up in the air." In certain South American governments there has been manifestly a feeling that Latin-America has been treated rather cavalierly by the United States and there is an undeniable tendency to resent any leadership or tutelage exercised by the Washington government.

It does not seem unreasonable to hope, however, that the conference of representatives of Latin-America may find that the discussion of their common economic problems will lead them to recognize that these interests would be served best by their declaring their moral adhesion to the international policy which the United States actively, and Brazil and Bolivia passively, have adopted.

Brumbaugh Reappoints Patton And Others

Governor Contends He Has Right to Appoint Those Who Were Refused

Harrisburg, July 7.—Governor Brumbaugh this afternoon announced reappointment of the eight officials whom the Senate last week refused to confirm. The list includes Charles E. Patton, of Curwensville, secretary of agriculture. Only the bare announcement was made at the executive department. Comment was refused. Brumbaugh's opponents contend that it is illegal to appoint men who have just been refused by the Senate. The next step is up to auditor General Snyder, who is an anti-Brumbaugh man. If he refuses the eight men their pay it will be taken to court.

Pershing's Army Will Have Important Section

Near St. Quentin and LaFere Where Shot and Shell are Thickest

By Perry Arnold.
(United Press Foreign Editor)
New York, July 7.—If, as reported from Washington, Major General Pershing's expeditionary army is to be given a place between the French and British armies in the western theater of war, they will have one of the most important sections of the western front under their eyes.

No one knows exactly the precise junction point of the French and British armies, but it is somewhere around St. Quentin and LaFere. The most southerly point mentioned in British official statements as having been fought over by Field Marshal Haig's forces is Fayet, about 20 miles north of St. Quentin.

Say, not more than two miles further south near St. Quentin, has recently been mentioned in the French war office statements. It was captured by French troops early in the war and presumably is occupied by now.

St. Quentin is an important point in the Douai-Comblain line of the German defense in western front. The British French offensive of March brought the Allied forces to within a mile of the city. It was at the of the offensive, apparently the main objectives of the which the French and British ed up Hindenburg's famous "zig retreat." Then, when was within actual sight of troops, a weakness in the German defense developed elsewhere. Franco-British front caused in plan, and the drive or was temporarily held blows struck at the w. SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 7, 1917.

Don't overlook our new feature today. The summary of the news culled from all sources. It will appear on the first column of page three daily.

We miss the editorial column of the Curwensville Herald very much this week and venture the suggestion that the sooner that "con" test is out of the way the better it will be for both The Herald and the business men of Curwensville. It detracts very much from the usual sprightliness of its columns.

Next week every woman in the nation will be asked to enroll in a first line of defense army under the leadership of Herbert Hoover, Food Administrator, Washington, D. C. It costs you nothing to enroll as a member. Mr. Hoover wants to know that every woman in the nation is with him in his efforts to conserve and preserve all foodstuffs. The Progress will have more to say about this movement early next week.

Yesterday evening Mr. Underwood contended in the Senate that the proposition of prohibiting the removal from bond of whiskey during the period of the war was unconstitutional because it deprived the distillers of their profits and spelled a loss for them. If this be the case, then prohibition itself would be unconstitutional, and the queer part of it is that this issue was never raised before. It simply shows the desperation of the liquor interests. Driven into a corner by the people who are demanding the death of the liquor traffic they are now resorting to a last line of defense, constitutionality, which is alwaysorted to by those who are doomed to defeat.

My towns have been made the victims of practical jokers during the last week. A fake poster is printed and certain numbers are given calling conscripts to the national service. Absolutely no attention should be paid to such notices or to any rumors that might become current. Each man drawn will receive a postcard giving him due notice of his being drawn and in addition to that we understand the numbers drawn will be given the fullest publicity. Another point that is not generally understood is the fact that the number drawn for service will not be the number which appears on your registration card but a serial number given your name by the Registration Board. You will first be notified of your serial number and this notification you may expect on any mail.

Dubois business has only recently recovered from a visit by a carnival company and according to the Daily Express there is another aggregation to visit them during the first week of August. Clearfield has been exceedingly fortunate this year keeping clear of these noisy pests and it is hoped that the business men will be on the lookout to prevent their coming here. People who spend the most money at carnivals are those who can ill afford to do so. There is no organization on the face of the globe that fosters and encourages the gambling spirit in the youth as the carnival. Usually they travel under the guise of some charity or benefit such as a lodge, firemen's organization and now they have seized upon the Red Cross Society as the vehicle upon which they ride over borough ordinances and the dictums of public decency. The Progress will strenuously oppose any proposition that will bring a carnival to Clearfield this year.

Daddy's Bedtime

WHEN the children had put away all their playthings daddy began: "After many adventures some twin brothers, long parted, met in an enchanted forest. One had released the other from witchcraft, and, very happy at being together again, they set off for home."

"One had become a king, and when they had got rid of the old witch the forest became bright and cheerful, so that they could see the royal palace three leagues away."

"Now, these twin brothers looked so much alike that when one was held by enchantment in the forest even the queen thought the brother her king. So he was dressed in royal robes, you see. All the time he planned how to save his brother from the spell."

"As they were returning home one said: 'We look so near alike in our robes, and, with our ten pets following us, let us have some fun. Let us enter the palace from opposite doors and each appear before the old king as his son-in-law.'"

"So they parted again, and the two guards ran from the doors at the same time, saying to the old king and his daughter that the young king and all his pet animals were coming back from the hunt in the enchanted woods."

"Impossible!" cried the old king. "The doors are too far apart!"

"But just then two young kings, each with five pet animals following him, entered the doors, crossed the courtyard and mounted the stairs."

"Of course the old king was amazed. He turned to his daughter and cried: 'My dear, make known to me which is your husband! I cannot tell!'"

"But the young queen could not tell which was which either. Then suddenly she remembered that when a young hunter had once saved her life from a dragon she had clasped her coral necklace on his neck. So now she ran to the pet lions and found the gold clasp on the neck of one."

"Then she cried joyfully. 'He whom this lion follows is my rightful husband!'"

"The young king was much pleased by this. It proved to him that his queen had not forgotten his bravery, you see."

"So he said: 'Yes, I am the right one.'"

"Then they all sat down at table together and made a merry feast, and when the king learned how his brother had planned to save him from enchantment the twins loved each other more than ever."

To Demolish St. Denis Hotel in New York

Old Landmark Will be Torn Down to Make Room for New Building

New York, July 7.—The fate of the St. Denis Hotel, one of the oldest in the city, which has been standing since 1880, is being decided by the city. The hotel, which has been standing since 1880, is being decided by the city. The hotel, which has been standing since 1880, is being decided by the city.

The St. Denis has many memories for old New Yorkers and for the older generation of visitors to the city. It had a highly successful career for many years, and only within a comparatively recent period have the newer and more magnificent hostilities taken away its business and robbed it of its fame.

The passing of the St. Denis will mark the disappearance of the last of the old hotel landmarks in lower New York. All of the formerly well known hotels below Union Square have disappeared, and few of the present generation can recall more than one or two of them.

Up to the early seventies nearly all the theatres and a large number of the hotels were below Fourteenth street. Twenty-third street being considered uptown, even as late as 1880. In addition to the St. Denis there were the more famous Astor House, near the foot of Park Row, the old Stevens House at Morris street, the Merchants' Hotel on Greenwich street, the Metropolitan at Prince street, including Niblo's Garden; the Grand Central (later Broadway Central) Bond street, the Prescott House, the Asinland, St. Nicholas, New York, and Sinclair House. All of these were below Fourteenth street with the Continental at Twenty-first street, and the Landmark at Twenty-second street and Fifth Avenue. Of this group only the St. Denis has for some time been the sole survivor.

Washington, July 6.—This year since January 1st, 1917, the Bureau reported 441 American cargoes sunk by submarines, with a loss of $9,200,000. Previous to that time the Bureau report a loss of only $800,000 due to submarine activities. Since the beginning of the war, 1914, the total salvage amounted to $79,000. Much of the loss has been to the delivering and exporting firms and insurance firms. Many insurance firms now refuse to insure the cargoes of vessels going into the war zone.

U-Boat Only Old Spar
Norfolk, Va., July 6.—But for the fact that bay passenger boats were halted and warned to navigate the head of the Chesapeake in a zig-zag course it is probably that local Navy and War department officials would have successfully prevented a leak of the submarine state that tied up shipping out of Hampton Roads yesterday afternoon for several hours.

Upon the arrival of these boats persons began to ring up newspaper offices to ask if there was any truth in the report that a German U-boat had slipped into the bay, explaining that their ships had been halted by navy craft and that navy officers in uniform with megaphones had warned of submarine danger. That the skippers of the vessels were mistaken was assured today. What they saw, in opinion of watermen, was a fish net or oyster stake floating end up, bobbing on the waves and being driven into the bay by the oncoming high tide. Weighted down with barnacles, these stakes often float for hours in an upright position.

Senate Rejects Beer Prohibition
Washington, July 6.—At the end of a day of acrimonious debate on the liquor feature of the food bill, the Senate tonight voted against the manufacture of distilled spirits during the war, against allowing their withdrawal from bond and against their import. By a decisive vote, it opposed putting ban on wines or beer.

The vote on all these propositions with the exception of that allowing wine and beer, however, was not final, the Senate taking a recess until tomorrow to pass upon the entire liquor section as it will remain in the bill. Action tomorrow will come upon an amendment offered by Senator Robinson, prohibiting distillation of liquor during the war, with amendment tacked on by Senator Cummins against distilled spirits being withdrawn from bond or being imported. Beer and wine, it is conceded, have been finally disposed of.

The fight today was concentrated upon the Cummins amendments to Senator Robinson's provision against distilled spirits and upon another amendment of Senator Myers, of Montana, to include wine and beer in the prohibitive legislation so as to make the nation bone dry. Senator Cummins got his antiwhiskey amendment against the use of whiskey in bond through a vote of 45 to 40. His amendment against the importation of whiskey was passed by a vote of 68 to 10. That of Senator Myers, aimed at putting the bar against beer and wine, was defeated by a vote of 52 to 34.

Orleans Sunk by U-Boat
Washington, July 6.—The American steamship Orleans of the Oriental Navigation company has been torpedoed and sunk by a submarine. Four of the crew were drowned but all members of the armed naval guard were saved. The state department, announcing the sinking today, withheld the place and the time of the attack. As the first ship flying the American flag to brave a transatlantic voyage after Germany announced her policy of relentless submarine warfare the Orleans was given a great demonstration on her arrival at Bordeaux. The Orleans, a vessel of 2,808 tons gross, left here June 18 with cargo for France, commanded by Capt. Allen D. Tucker. In her crew of 36 were 10 American citizens.

SUNDAY SCHOOL

Lesson II.—Third Quarter, For July 8, 1917.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, II Chron. xxviii, 1-27; Memory Verses, 1, 2—Golden Text, Heb. xi, 6—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

This is a hard lesson about a desperately bad man, one of the very worst of the kings of Judah, of whom it is said, "This is that king Ahaz" (verse 22). Manasseh may have been worse in some respects, but he repented, while of this man we read of no repentance. There were always some who feared God, a Godly remnant, and the sixteen years of this man's reign must have been a heartbreaking time for them, but no doubt a time of humiliation and unceasing prayer to God, and in due time deliverance came, as we shall see in our next lesson.

Years of trial are always times of faith and patience on the part of God's people, and the terrible days still before us, of which we are having already some foretastes, will give great opportunity for the manifestation of such graces (Heb. vi, 12, 15; Rev. xiii, 10). All life's story as well as all the Bible story is either a manifestation of God or the devil, and so it will be until a king shall reign in righteousness and peace and the devil be shut up in the pit for a thousand years. It is written of Ahaz that he did not right in the sight of the Lord, but walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, and they, without exception, walked in the steps of Jeroboam, son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

What Ahaz did that was wrong and desperately sinful is quite fully recorded in our lesson chapter and in II Kings xvi. He burned incense to other gods not only in Jerusalem, but in all the cities of Judah and on the hills and under every green tree. He burned his children in the fire like the heathen whom the Lord had cast out. He leaned on the king of Assyria and worshiped the gods of the king of Syria. He had an altar made like one he saw in Damascus and put it in place of the brazen altar of the Lord and offered sacrifices upon it. He took the great laver from off the brazen ox which supported it and set it on a pavement of stones. He cut in pieces the vessels of the house of God and shut up the doors of the house of the Lord. It seemed as if he could not do enough to show his hatred of God and His commandments. Yet he had a good father, Jotham, who beams mightily because he prepared his ways before the Lord his God (xxvii, 6), and he had a good son, as we shall see in our next lesson.

These things are a great perplexity, just as similar things are in our own times. But there is rest in the Lord, and in Him alone, and in the fact that He cannot fail nor be discouraged (Isa. xlii, 4). The Lord brought Judah low because of Ahaz and because they had forgotten the Lord God of their fathers (verses 6, 19), but they did not repent nor turn to Him again. Isaiah and Micah were the Lord's messengers in those days, as we learn from the first verse of each of these prophecies, and the Lord sent Isaiah with a special message to Ahaz, telling him that if he would turn to the Lord the purpose of the Syrians against him would not stand nor come to pass and that he might be quiet and not be afraid of them, but that if he would not believe he would not be established. On that occasion Isaiah was to take with him his son, Shear-Jashub, whose name signifies the remnant shall return, for, as we said earlier in this lesson, there is always a godly remnant, and it seemed like saying to Ahaz that if he would not turn to the Lord the remnant would (Isa. vii, 1-9).

It was to this same Ahaz the Lord said, "Ask thee a sign of the Lord thy God; ask it either in the depth or in the height above," and Ahaz said, "I will not ask; neither will I tempt the Lord (Isa. vii, 10-12). He had provoked the Lord seemingly beyond all endurance, yet hear him say, I will not tempt the Lord. If he meant to say, I will not ask the Lord for anything nor have anything to do with Him, we could understand him better, for that is what his actions were saying and perhaps what he meant to say. Now hear this wonderful message from the Lord to such a man representing the house of David and at such a time: "The Lord Himself shall give you a sign. Behold, a virgin shall conceive and bear a son and shall call His name Immanuel" (Isa. vii, 13, 14). You cannot but think of the first assurance of the great deliverer being made to the devil himself (Gen. iii, 14, 15), and we know that when the devil shall come to the time of his very worst opposition to and defiance of God then shall He who in the fullness of time was really born of a virgin come in His glory to overthrow all His enemies and set up His kingdom.

When the devil incarnate, the coming antichrist, shall have gathered the kings of the earth and their armies against Him who is coming on the white horse, the Lamb shall overcome them, for He is King of kings and Lord of lords (Rev. xvi, 14; xix, 19). That will be the morning of the Sun of Righteousness of which David spoke in his last words, but there will be no morning for such as Ahaz, who have no use for God or His word (II Sam. xxiii, 3-5; Isa. viii, 20, R. V.). The glorious assurances of Isaiah ix and xi and xii surely cry aloud to us.

When township school board will employ teachers July 21st at 8 p. m. W. R. SHREY, President. J. D. FLEGAL, Secretary.

CURWENSVILLE

The house occupied by Harry O'Dell, North Filbert street, was struck, breaking all the windows in the kitchen and pantry, also all dishes in the cupboard; knocking the plaster off and tearing the lumber away from the walls. Fortunately Mrs. O'Dell and the children were in the other part of the house with the doors leading to the kitchen from hall and dining room were closed. Several of the electric lights along Filbert street were knocked out, phones put out of commission and other damage done.

Elks Hold Convention In City Of Boston

City Swathed in Purple and White Bunting in Honor of Visitors

Boston, Mass., July 7.—Boston is swathed in bunting of purple and white in honor of visiting members of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks who arrived in the city by hundreds today from every section of the country. While the gathering does not have its formal opening until tomorrow, when the delegates will attend religious services at Trinity church, the reunion activities have already begun. Delegations from the lodges of Greater Boston in their white suits met every incoming train and escorted the arrivals to the hotels.

The program for the reunion will follow those established by the custom of previous years, with the exception that the annual convention parade will be eliminated. The $10,000 originally allotted for this fixture will be donated to patriotic funds. In place of the parade it has been decided to hold a mammoth military procession, to be followed by a patriotic demonstration, on Boston Common. Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois has been selected to deliver the patriotic oration.

ELIZABETH GRAHAM DEHAAS

Mrs. Elizabeth Graham DeHaas, of Kermoor, died at her home on Tuesday, July 3rd, 1917. Mrs. DeHaas was in her seventy-fifth year, being 74 years, 1 month and 7 days old. She was a noble christian woman, always looking to God for comfort. Her husband with whom she had lived over fifty years a peaceful, happy, life passed to his reward a year ago, and since his death Mrs. DeHaas has been failing rapidly until the end came as above stated. A more peaceful and welcome home one could not enter than the DeHaas home. She belonged to the Presbyterian church at Kermoor for a number of years. She raised a large family of children, all being an honor to their parents. Another useful life gone to its great reward, but her remembrance will live long in the hearts of those who knew her. Requescent in pace.

Make Furnace and Tinning Repairs RIGHT NOW

There Are Several Things That Enter Into The Problem. We'll Explain Why We Urge It At This Time.

First: This is a time when our force is not as busy as usual and we can give you quicker service than later when the houses that are under construction reach the point where our men will be kept on the jump.

Second: Several members of our force are subject to the conscription and it will disrupt our system for a little time, thus interfering with our usual prompt service.

ELIMINATION SALE

Summer Wash Dresses

BEGINNING

Tuesday Morning, July 17, 1917

SALE

This important sale is just one of those rare and unexpected buying opportunities that we run across every once in a while and which we pass on to our customers. That this announcement will cause spirited buying is a foregone conclusion. Read the details below.

The reason that made possible the opportunity to buy these dresses at much less than actual value are very simple. First of all, the cold and rainy backward season of the past weeks found the manufacturers of these dresses with an unusual stock on hand. Then again we bought the entire lot that had just been set aside at the close-out price. It so happens that our buyer visited the manufacturer of these dresses on the very day they decided to close them out, in consequence of which we had the first opportunity of buying the entire lot at a price far below the actual value. We did not lose a single moment in making the purchase. And so beginning Tuesday morning, when the store opens we place on sale 100 Women's and Misses Pretty New Summer Wash Dresses of plain, striped and figured voiles, and various other popular material.

Tuesday You may take your choice of any Wash Dress in the lot at $9.50

Wednesday You may take your choice of any Wash Dress in the lot at $8.50

Allied line in this particular sector
now runs something like this:

From Gonnelleu, to Villers Guis-
lain, to Epehy, to Ronssy, Pontru,
Maiseimy, Fregnoy le Petit, Fayet,
Selenoy, Savy, Chauny, Coucy le Chateau, Landricourt. All these towns are held by the French and
British troops.

Supposing that this is the section
picked for the American expeditionary army, it seems reasonable to presume there will soon be another drive at the basic city of St. Quentin carried out by the Americans.

St. Quentin and the city of LaFere,
the latter located approximately twelve miles to the south are the foundations on which Hindenburg built his famous "line." The German front in this particular section swings
in a great arc from St. Quentin to LaFere, below Laon and then sharply upward again along the front where

the French have recently won their wonderful success in the Aisne drive,
to Rheims.

From this description, it will be seen that penetration of the German lines anywhere along this arc not only would menace the German grip
on all of Flanders and Belgium to the north, but likewise would give opportunity for a tremendous flanking movement on the German lines to the south.

For this reason some of the fiercest
fighting of the war has made the St.
Quentin sector bloody ground on the western front. Directly ahead of the city lies some of the most terrible ravaged ground of all that which the Germans relinquished in their "strategic retreat." Dispatches received in April and May from William
Philip Simms and Henry Wood, the United Press staff correspondents
with the British and French armies,
told vividly of the destruction wreak-
ed upon the villages of Vermand, Ham, St. Simon, Savy and others in the path of this retreating horde.

"By the time American troops arrive there—if the Washington reports are accurate—they will, however, find this wasted land all rebuilt. New roads have been constructed and the great jagged holes left by shells

smoothed over in part at least.

The St. Quentin sector is ideally located for the "American front." Two big trunk lines of railways will give full access to it, the land is greatly level and drained by the Somme river.
Beyond St. Quentin the land held by the Germans becomes more hilly.

GREATER AIR FLEET TERRORIZES LONDON BY FLYING LOW ENOUGH TO THE STREETS TO BE VISIBLE

Details Withheld But It Is Believed That As Many As Twenty Crafts Were In German Attacking Fleet

BIGGEST AIR FLEET EVER TO ATTACK

London July 7.—Twenty enemy aeroplanes raided London today. Lord French, commander of the Home Defense forces, made preliminary announcement early today but gave no details.

Shortly before the announcement of the raid Lord French issued a statement saying that at 9:30 this morning hostile aeroplanes in considerable number in two parts had been sighted off the Isle of Bannet and the east coast of Essex. The raid on London occurred at 10:30.

This is the largest number of German aeroplanes ever participating in a raid over London. Apparently profiting by their poor bomb throwing at such a great height the German raiders today flew so low that they could be seen from the streets. This was directly contrary to other raids in which the aeroplanes were invisible.

The German aeroplanes which participated in the raid were brought down by the British as the enemy air fleet was returning to its base the Admiralty announced this afternoon.

AN OLD TIMER CALLS

Squire H. J. Sloppy, of New Millport, a prominent Knox township citizen, was a Clearfield visitor yesterday and while here dropped into the Progress office to chat with friends. Squire told us he was a native of Union county and came to Clearfield county away back in '49 and has since resided in the New Millport section. He is a Jeffersonian Democrat of the old school and is exceptionally well informed generally. He expressed the hope for an early settlement of the world war and is afraid the conscript law will drain the country of its young manhood, being a veteran of the Civil war he has first hand knowledge of the ravages of war.

NOTICE

OSCEOLA YOUNG MAN KILLED BY LIGHTNING

Paul Dugan Vainly Sought Refuge From Electrical Storm In Coal Mine Opening

BOLT STRUCK TREE NEARBY

Osceola Mills, July 7.—During a severe electrical and hail storm which passed over this vicinity yesterday afternoon Paul Dugan was struck by lightning and instantly killed. The young man, together with Arthur Dugan and Henry Nickerson were hauling coal for his father at "Polly's Knob." When the storm came on they sought shelter in a small opening or drift from which the coal had been removed. On the surface of the ground directly over them was a large tree, which was struck by lightning, the bolt passing from the tree down into the ground to where the men sat. The young man was about 24 years of age and is survived by his parents and several brothers and sisters. James Dugan, a brother, is proprietor of the Mountain House. The others who were with him were shocked also but under medical treatment soon recovered.

HOWARD E. COFFIN

As chairman of the Aircraft Production Board of the Council of National Defense, Howard E. Coffin probably bears more responsibility for the administration of the present aviation program than any other man in Washington.

Coffin is a westerner of tremendous vision and has given his time and money without a cent of return to the government. He has organized airplane manufacturers of America into one large association for the defense of the nation. He has helped work out a plan for an airplane engine that is said to be a wonder.

He is in his early forties and is one of the big crop of rapid successes begun in the automobile industry fifteen years ago. As head of the committee on munitions and materials he is also responsible for automobile trucks, training of chauffeurs, tires, motorization of field artillery and everything which runs with an engine.

The wedding was very quiet only the relatives and intimate friends being present, on account of recent death of the bride's mother.

The bride was becomingly attired in a gray silk jersey suit with a satin hat to match.

Following the ceremony the wedding breakfast was served after which the bride and groom left for a honeymoon trip to Harrisburg and York. They will spend most of the time camping at the Oberdick cottage near York.

LATIN AMERICAS HOLD CONGRESS BUENOS AYRES

Called for Purpose of Mediation Proposals is Reverts to Matters of Mutual Protection

MAY INDORSE U. S. ACTION

Buenos Aires, July 9.—The Congress of Latin-American Republics, which meet in Buenos Aires this week in response to an invitation from the Argentine government, is expected to be attended by eminent official representatives of all countries of Central and South America that have maintained an attitude of neutrality in the present war. As aelligent, the United States is disappointed from participation in the conference; likewise it is not expected that Brazil will have any official voice in the proceedings, in review of the attitude recently adopted by the government of Rio de Janeiro in ordering the Brazilian fleet to co-operate with the United States squadron in the patrol of the South Atlantic.

Events with relation to the world war and the great question of South America neutrality have moved so rapidly late that it is impossible to state the aims or forecast the probable results of the Latin-American congress with any degree of certainty. Nothing definite is known, outside of official circles at least, of the explicit theme or themes which it is proposed to discuss at the meeting.

When the conference was first mooted its object was said to be nothing less than the ambitious one of peace mediation between the nations at war. So far as can be gathered to-day that object has settled down to the formulation of a policy for the protection of the economic interests of Latin-America in so far as they are affected by the war and threatened after the war. It is felt presumably that if solidarity in this respect can be arrived at, the united front presented by an entire continent will be more efficacious than the isolated action of any individual republic or group of republics.

Pan-Americanism has been subjected to a very severe test within the last few months and the entry of its most powerful component unit—the United States—into the war, has left most of the other republics more or less "up in the air." In certain South American governments there has been manifestly a feeling that Latin-America has been treated rather cavalierly by the United States and there is an undeniable tendency to resent any leadership or tutelage exercised by the Washington government.

It does not seem unreasonable to hope, however, that the conference of representatives of Latin-America may find that the discussion of their common economic problems will lead them to recognize that these interests would be served best by their declaring their moral adherence to the international policy which the United States actively, and Brazil and Bolivia passively, have adopted.

Patton, of Curwensville, secretary of agriculture. Only the bare announcement was made at the executive department. Comment was refused. If he refuses the eight men their pay it will be taken to court.

Pershing's Army Will Have Important Section

Near St. Quentin and LaFere Where Shot and Shell are Thickest

By Perry Arnold.
(United Press Foreign Editor)
New York, July 7.—If, as reported from Washington, Major General Pershing's expeditionary army is to be given a place between the French and British armies in the western theater of war, they will have one of the most important sections of the western front under their eyes.

No one knows exactly the precise junction point of the French and British armies, but it is somewhere around St. Quentin and LaFere. The most southerly point mentioned in British official statements is that British forces are fighting on the north of St. Quentin.

Says, not more than two miles from the south near St. Quentin, but was quite mentioned in the French war office statements. It was captured by French troops early in the war and presumably is occupied by now.

St. Quentin is an important point in the Douai-Comblain line of the German defense in the western front. The British French offensive of March brought the Allied forces to within a mile of the city. It was at the time of the offensive, apparently the main objectives of the attack which the French and British had hoped to achieve. Then, when was within actual sight of the city, a weakness in the German defense developed elsewhere. Franco-British front caused in plan, and the drive or was temporarily held back. As far as official statements go.

SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 7, 1917.

Don't overlook our new feature today. The summary of the news culled from all sources. It will appear on the first column of page three daily.

We miss the editorial column of the Curwensville Herald very much this week and venture the suggestion that the sooner that "con" test is out of the way the better it will be for both The Herald and the business men of Curwensville. It detracts very much from the usual sprightliness of its columns.

Next week every woman in the nation will be asked to enroll in a first line of defense army under the leadership of Herbert Hoover, Food Administrator, Washington, D. C. It costs you nothing to enroll as a member. Mr. Hoover wants to know that every woman in the nation is with him in his efforts to conserve and preserve all foodstuffs. The Progress will have more to say about this movement early next week.

Yesterday evening Mr. Underwood contended in the Senate that the proposition of prohibiting the removal from bond of whiskey during the period of the war was unconstitutional because it deprived the distillers of their profits and spelled a loss for them. If this be the case, then prohibition itself would be unconstitutional, and the queer part of it is that this issue was never raised before. It simply shows the desperation of the liquor interests. Driven into a corner by the people who are demanding the death of the liquor traffic they are now resorting to a last line of defense, constitutionality, which is alwaysorted to by those who are doomed to defeat.

towns have been made the victims of practical jokers during the last week. A fake poster is printed and certain numbers are given calling conscripts to the national service. Absolutely no attention should be paid to such notices or to any rumors that might become current. Each man drawn will receive a postcard giving him due notice of his being drawn and in addition to that we understand the numbers drawn will be given the fullest publicity. Another point that is not generally understood is the fact that the number drawn for service will not be the number which appears on your registration card but a serial number given your name by the Registration Board. You will first be notified of your serial number and this notification you may expect on any mail.

Dubois business has only recently recovered from a visit by a carnival company and according to the Daily Express there is another aggregation to visit them during the first week of August. Clearfield has been exceedingly fortunate this year keeping clear of these noisy pests and it is hoped that the business men will be on the lookout to prevent their coming here. People who spend the most money at carnivals are those who can ill afford to do so. There is no organization on the face of the globe that fosters and encourages the gambling spirit in the youth as the carnival. Usually they travel under the guise of some charity or benefit such as a lodge, firemen's organization and now they have seized upon the Red Cross Society as the vehicle upon which they ride over borough ordinances and the dictums of public decency. The Progress will strenuously oppose any proposition that will bring a carnival to Clearfield this year.

WHEN the children had put away all their playthings daddy began: "After many adventures some twin brothers, long parted, met in an enchanted forest. One had released the other from witchcraft, and, very happy at being together again, they set off for home."

"One had become a king, and when they had got rid of the old witch the forest became bright and cheerful, so that they could see the royal palace three leagues away."

"Now, these twin brothers looked so much alike that when one was held by enchantment in the forest even the queen thought the brother her king. So he was dressed in royal robes, you see. All the time he planned how to save his brother from the spell."

"As they were returning home one said: 'We look so near alike in our robes, and, with our ten pets following us, let us have some fun. Let us enter the palace from opposite doors and each appear before the old king as his son-in-law.'"

"So they parted again, and the two guards ran from the doors at the same time, saying to the old king and his daughter that the young king and all his pet animals were coming back from the hunt in the enchanted woods."

"Impossible!" cried the old king. "The doors are too far apart!"

"But just then two young kings, each with five pet animals following him, entered the doors, crossed the courtyard and mounted the stairs."

"Of course the old king was amazed. He turned to his daughter and cried: 'My dear, make known to me which is your husband! I cannot tell!'"

"But the young queen could not tell which was which either. Then suddenly she remembered that when a young hunter had once saved her life from a dragon she had clasped her good necklace on his neck. So now she ran to the pet lions and found the gold clasp on the neck of one."

"Then she cried joyfully, 'He whom this lion follows is my rightful husband!'"

"The young king was much pleased by this. It proved to him that his queen had not forgotten his bravery, you see."

"So he said, 'Yes; I am the right one.'"

"Then they all sat down at table together and made a merry feast, and when the king learned how his brother had planned to save him from enchantment the twins loved each other more than ever."

To Demolish St. Denis Hotel in New York

Old Landmark Will be Torn Down to Make Room for New Building

New York, July 7.—The fate of the St. Denis Hotel, one of the oldest in the city, which has been standing since 1810, is being decided by the city. The hotel, which is situated at the corner of Broadway and Eleventh street opposite Grace Church, has been sealed by the announcement that its demolition is being considered. The St. Denis has many memories for old New Yorkers and for the older generation of visitors to the city. It had a highly successful career for many years, and only within a comparatively recent period have the newer and more magnificent hostilities taken away its business and robbed it of its fame.

The passing of the St. Denis will mark the disappearance of the last of the old hotel landmarks in lower New York. All of the formerly well known hotels below Union Square have disappeared, and few of the present generation can recall more than one or two of them.

Up to the early seventies nearly all the theatres and a large number of the hotels were below Fourteenth street. Twenty-third street being considered uptown, even as late as 1880. In addition to the St. Denis there were the more famous Astor House, near the foot of Park Row, the old Stevens House at Morris street, the Metropolitan Hotel on Greenwich street, the Hotel at Prince street, including Niblo's Garden; the Grand Central (later Broadway Central) Bond street, the Prescott House, the Asineland, St. Nicholas, New York, and Sinclair House. All of these were below Fourteenth street with the Continental at Twenty-first street, and the Landmark at Twenty-second street and Fifth Avenue. Of this group only the St. Denis has for some time been the sole survivor.

Washington, July 6.—This year since January 1st, 1917, the Bureau reported 441 American cargoes sunk by submarines, with a loss of $9,200,000. Previous to that time the Bureau report a loss of only $800,000 due to submarine activities. Since the beginning of the war, 1914, the total salvage amounted to $79,000. Much of the loss has been to the delivering and exporting firms and insurance firms. Many insurance firms now refuse to insure the cargoes of vessels going into the war zone.

Cost Per Pupil
According to official figures the cost per pupil in the public schools of DuBois is higher than in any of the neighboring towns, with the exception of Ridgway. Some of the figures are as follows: Sunbury $28.21; DuBois $28.70; Tyrone $27.39; Kittanning $31.09; Clearfield $33.46; Ridgway $33.94.

Net Catches Big One
Washington, D. C., July 6.—The first tangible results of the big drive against German agents in this country materialized tonight when it developed that Heinrich Schaffhausen, known count von Bernstorff caused to be detained by the Swiss Legion when United States severed diplomatic relations, will leave the United States within the next few hours at the instance of the State department.

U-Boat Only Old Spar
Norfolk, Va., July 6.—But for the fact that bay passenger boats were halted and warned to navigate the head of the Chesapeake in a zig-zag course it is probably that local Navy and War department officials would have successfully prevented a leak of the submarine state that tied up shipping out of Hampton Roads yesterday afternoon for several hours.

Upon the arrival of these boats persons began to ring up newspaper offices to ask if there was any truth in the report that a German U-boat had slipped into the bay, explaining that their ships had been halted by navy craft and that navy officers in uniform with megaphones had warned of submarine danger. That the skippers of the vessels were mistaken was assured today. What they saw, in opinion of watermen, was a fish net or oyster stake floating end up, bobbing on the waves and being driven into the bay by the oncoming high tide. Weighted down with barnacles, these stakes often float for hours in an upright position.

Senate Rejects Beer Prohibition
Washington, July 6.—At the end of a day of acrimonious debate on the liquor feature of the food bill, the Senate tonight voted against the manufacture of distilled spirits during the war, against allowing their withdrawal from bond and against their import. By a decisive vote, it opposed putting ban on wines or beer.

The vote on all these propositions with the exception of that allowing wine and beer, however, was not final, the Senate taking a recess until tomorrow to pass upon the entire liquor section as it will remain in the bill. Action tomorrow will come upon an amendment offered by Senator Robinson, prohibiting distillation of liquor during the war, with amendment tacked on by Senator Cummins against distilled spirits being withdrawn from bond or being imported. Beer and wine, it is conceded, have been finally disposed of.

The fight today was concentrated upon the Cummins amendments to Senator Robinson's provision against distilled spirits and upon another amendment of Senator Myers, of Montana, to include wine and beer in the prohibitive legislation so as to make the nation bone dry. Senator Cummins got his antiwhiskey amendment against the use of whiskey in bond through a vote of 45 to 40. His amendment against the importation of whiskey was passed by a vote of 68 to 10. That of Senator Myers, aimed at putting the bar against beer and wine, was defeated by a vote of 52 to 34.

Orleans Sunk by U-Boat

Washington, July 6.—The American steamship Orleans of the Oriental Navigation company has been torpedoed and sunk by a submarine. Four of the crew were drowned but all members of the armed naval guard were saved. The state department, announcing the sinking today, withheld the place and the time of the attack. As the first ship flying the American flag to brave a transatlantic voyage after Germany announced her policy of relentless submarine warfare the Orleans was given a great demonstration on her arrival at Bordeaux. The Orleans, a vessel of 2,808 tons gross, left here June 18 with cargo for France, commanded by Capt. Allen D. Tucker. In her crew of 36 were 10 American citizens.

SUNDAY SCHOOL

Lesson II.—Third Quarter, For July 8, 1917.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, II Chron. xxviii, 1-27; Memory Verses, 1, 2—Golden Text, Heb. xi, 6—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

This is a hard lesson about a desperately bad man, one of the very worst of the kings of Judah, of whom it is said, "This is that king Ahaz" (verse 22). Manasseh may have been worse in some respects, but he repented, while of this man we read of no repentance. There were always some who feared God, a Godly remnant, and the sixteen years of this man's reign must have been a heartbreaking time for them, but no doubt a time of humiliation and unceasing prayer to God, and in due time deliverance came, as we shall see in our next lesson.

Years of trial are always times of faith and patience on the part of God's people, and the terrible days still before us, of which we are having already some foretastes, will give great opportunity for the manifestation of such graces (Heb. vi, 12, 15; Rev. xiii, 10). All life's story as well as all the Bible story is either a manifestation of God or the devil, and so it will be until a king shall reign in righteousness and peace and the devil be shut up in the pit for a thousand years. It is written of Ahaz that he did not right in the sight of the Lord, but walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, and they, without exception, walked in the steps of Jeroboam, son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

What Ahaz did that was wrong and desperately sinful is quite fully recorded in our lesson chapter and in II Kings xvi. He burned incense to other gods not only in Jerusalem, but in all the cities of Judah and on the hills and under every green tree. He burned his children in the fire like the heathen whom the Lord had cast out. He leaned on the king of Assyria and worshiped the gods of the king of Syria. He had an altar made like one he saw in Damascus and put it in place of the brazen altar of the Lord and offered sacrifices upon it. He took the great laver from off the brazen ox which supported it and set it on a pavement of stones. He cut in pieces the vessels of the house of God and shut up the doors of the house of the Lord. It seemed as if he could not do enough to show his hatred of God and His commandments. Yet he had a good father, Jotham, who beams mightily because he prepared his ways before the Lord his God (xxvii, 6), and he had a good son, as we shall see in our next lesson.

These things are a great perplexity, just as similar things are in our own times. But there is rest in the Lord, and in Him alone, and in the fact that He cannot fail nor be discouraged (Isa. xlii, 4). The Lord brought Judah low because of Ahaz and because they had forgotten the Lord God of their fathers (verses 6, 19), but they did not repent nor turn to Him again. Isaiah and Micah were the Lord's messengers in those days, as we learn from the first verse of each of these prophecies, and the Lord sent Isaiah with a special message to Ahaz, telling him that if he would turn to the Lord the purpose of the Syrians against him would not stand nor come to pass and that he might be quiet and not be afraid of them, but that if he would not believe he would not be established. On that occasion Isaiah was to take with him his son, Shear-Jashub, whose name signifies the remnant shall return, for, as we said earlier in this lesson, there is always a godly remnant, and it seemed like saying to Ahaz that if he would not turn to the Lord the remnant would (Isa. vii, 1-9).

It was to this same Ahaz the Lord said, "Ask thee a sign of the Lord thy God; ask it either in the depth or in the height above," and Ahaz said, "I will not ask; neither will I tempt the Lord (Isa. vii, 10-12). He had provoked the Lord seemingly beyond all endurance, yet hear him say, I will not tempt the Lord. If he meant to say, I will not ask the Lord for anything nor have anything to do with Him, we could understand him better, for that is what his actions were saying and perhaps what he meant to say. Now hear this wonderful message from the Lord to such a man representing the house of David and at such a time: "The Lord Himself shall give you a sign. Behold, a virgin shall conceive and bear a son and shall call His name Immanuel" (Isa. vii, 13, 14). You cannot but think of the first assurance of the great deliverer being made to the devil himself (Gen. iii, 14, 15), and we know that when the devil shall come to the time of his very worst opposition to and defiance of God then shall He who in the fullness of time was really born of a virgin come in His glory to overthrow all His enemies and set up His kingdom.

When the devil incarnate, the coming antichrist, shall have gathered the kings of the earth and their armies against Him who is coming on the white horse, the Lamb shall overcome them, for He is King of kings and Lord of lords (Rev. xvii, 14; xix, 19). That will be the morning of the Sun of Righteousness of which David spoke in his last words, but there will be no morning for such as Ahaz, who have no use for God or His word (II Sam. xxiii, 3-5; Isa. viii, 20, R. V.). The glorious assurances of Isaiah ix and xi and xii surely cry aloud to us.

Elks Hold Convention In City Of Boston

City Swathed in Purple and White Bunting in Honor of Visitors

Boston, Mass., July 7.—Boston is swathed in bunting of purple and white in honor of visiting members of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks who arrived in the city by hundreds today from every section of the country. While the gathering does not have its formal opening until tomorrow, when the delegates will attend religious services at Trinity church, the reunion activities have already begun. Delegations from the lodges of Greater Boston in their white suits met every incoming train and escorted the arrivals to the hotels.

The program for the reunion will follow those established by the custom of previous years, with the exception that the annual convention parade will be eliminated. The $10,000 originally allotted for this fixture will be donated to patriotic funds. In place of the parade it has been decided to hold a mammoth military procession, to be followed by a patriotic demonstration, on Boston Common. Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois has been selected to deliver the patriotic oration.

ELIZABETH GRAHAM DEHAAS

Mrs. Elizabeth Graham DeHaas, of Kermoor, died at her home on Tuesday, July 3rd, 1917. Mrs. DeHaas was in her seventy-fifth year, being 74 years, 1 month and 7 days old. She was a noble christian woman, always looking to God for comfort. Her husband with whom she had lived over fifty years a peaceful, happy, life passed to his reward a year ago, and since his death Mrs. DeHaas has been failing rapidly until the end came as above stated. A more peaceful and welcome home one could not enter than the DeHaas home. She belonged to the Presbyterian church at Kermoor for a number of years. She raised a large family of children, all being an honor to their parents. Another useful life gone to its great reward, but her remembrance will live long in the hearts of those who knew her. Requiescat in pace.

Make Furnace and Tinning Repairs RIGHT NOW

There Are Several Things That Enter Into The Problem. We'll Explain Why We Urge It At This Time.

First: This is a time when our force is not as busy as usual and we can give you quicker service than later when the houses that are under construction reach the point where our men will be kept on the jump.

Second: Several members of our force are subject to the conscription and it will disrupt our system for a little time, thus interfering with our usual prompt service.

Summer Wash Dresses

BEGINNING

Tuesday Morning, July 17, 1917

SALE

This important sale is just one of those rare and unexpected buying opportunities that we run across every once in a while and which we pass on to our customers. That this announcement will cause spirited buying is a foregone conclusion. Read the details below.

The reason that made possible the opportunity to buy these dresses at much less than actual value are very simple. First of all, the cold and rainy backward season of the past weeks found the manufacturers of these dresses with an unusual stock on hand. Then again we bought the entire lot that had just been set aside at the close-out price. It so happens that our buyer visited the manufacturer of these dresses on the very day they decided to close them out, in consequence of which we had the first opportunity of buying the entire lot at a price far below the actual value. We did not lose a single moment in making the purchase. And so beginning Tuesday morning, when the store opens we place on sale 100 Women's and Misses Pretty New Summer Wash Dresses of plain, striped and figured voiles, and various other popular material.

Tuesday You may take your choice of any Wash Dress in the lot at $9.50

Wednesday You may take your choice of any Wash Dress in the lot at $8.50

Pershing's Army Will Have Important Sector

past three months have shown, the Allied line in this particular sector
now runs something like this:

From Gonnelleu, to Villers Guis-
lain, to Epehy, to Ronssuoy, Pontru,
Maiseimy, Fregnoy le Petit, Fayet,
Selenoy, Savy, Chauny, Coucy le
Chateau, Landricourt. All these towns are held by the French and
British troops.

Supposing that this is the section
picked for the American expeditionary army, it seems reasonable to
presume there will soon be another
drive at the basic city of St. Quentin
carried out by the Americans.

St. Quentin and the city of LaFere,
the latter located approximately
twelve miles to the south are the foundations on which Hindenburg
built his famous "line." The German
front in this particular section swings
in a great arc from St. Quentin to LaFere, below Laon and then sharply upward again along the front where

the French have recently won their
wonderful success in the Aisne drive,
to Rheims.

From this description, it will be seen that penetration of the German
lines anywhere along this arc not
only would menace the German grip
on all of Flanders and Belgium to the north, but likewise would give opportunity for a tremendous flanking
movement on the German lines to the south.

For this reason some of the fiercest
fighting of the war has made the St.
Quentin sector bloody ground on the western front. Directly ahead of the city lies some of the most terrible
ravaged ground of all that which the Germans relinquished in their "strategic retreat." Dispatches received
in April and May from William
Philip Simms and Henry Wood, the United Press staff correspondents
with the British and French armies,
told vividly of the destruction wreak-
ed upon the villages of Vermand,
Ham, St. Simon, Savy and others in the path of this retreating horde.

"By the time American troops arrive there—if the Washington reports
are accurate—they will, however, find
this wasted land all rebuilt. New

smoothed over in part at least.

The St. Quentin sector is ideally located for the "American front." Two big trunk lines of railways will give
full access to it, the land is greatly
level and drained by the Somme river.
Beyond St. Quentin the land held by the Germans becomes more hilly.
